The worm farm

“Good afternoon, class.” Mr. Bell says. “Let’s go to the Green Corner!”

The children love visiting the school garden. There are chickens, flowers and a huge worm farm there.

Mr. Bell is a teacher. He has a round head and not much hair. The top of his head is pink. Very pink.

There are twenty schoolchildren in the class. Well, twenty-one children ... but no one sees the small boy with long, brown hair. He is new and does not have any friends.

Who are you?

The chickens are out in the garden. Mr. Bell shouts. “Catch the chickens! We don’t want them to eat the worms in our worm farm.”

The boy walks to the worm farm and looks through the glass. He can see many worm families. He picks up a worm and licks it with his tongue.

“Look – it’s the new kid! He likes licking worms!” Ali says. “Awesome! But who are you?”
